LOCAL BREVITIES.

The summer boarder now homeward flies—or thereabouts.

Which is worse, imprisonment for life or a life-long disease, like scrofula, for example? The former, certainly, would be preferable were it not that Ayer's Sarsaparilla can always come to the rescue and give the poor sufferer health, strength, and happiness.

The total eclipse of the moon at 11 o'clock Tuesday night was followed at 3 o'clock next morning by a heavy storm of wind and rain. The connection between the two occurrences is not firmly established, but both were plainly palpable to the eye, ear and sense.

The Oliver house is vacant for the present, but will probably soon have an occupant. Mr. Kathman, the owner, is in daily receipt of letters containing propositions for its renting, but he is in no haste to lease it, except to the right party. He wants an occupant who will do both himself and the house justice.

The Quarterly Conference of the A. M. E. Church of this district is now being held here. Among those present are: Rev. J. Will Jackson, D. D., Sedalia; and Revs. M. H. Palmer, De Soto; B. McCain, C. P. Thompson, H. H. McAllister, and W. H. H. Brown, St. Louis; J. B. Plummer, Versailles; B. F. Fields, Hannibal; T. H. Lockwood, Farmington; and J. A. White, Fredericktown.

Geo. Hughes, Esq., and family, of Palestine, Texas, are in Ironton visiting his mother, Mrs. Hughes. He gave the Register a call on Monday, and his visit reminded us of the swift passage of time. It seems but yesterday that he was a schoolboy, and yet here he is a man of mature years, with children as old as he was himself in the times recalled by his presence. He is a "railroad man" of acknowledged ability, and we hope success may ever attend him.

One of the heaviest storms of rain and wind experienced here this year visited this section Wednesday morning about three o'clock. The rain fell in torrents, and the wind for some threatened destruction to houses and trees in the more exposed places. Fortunately the war of the elements passed without material damage to men and things, and the cloudless sky of the day previous was duplicated yesterday. The morn was dark and lowering, it is true, but the sun dispersed the clouds and Nature smiled again.

Born—To Dr. and Mrs. A. S. Price, Ironton, on Tuesday, Sept. 3d, 1895, at 4 o'clock A. M., a daughter. This makes the honors easy as to boys and girls in the Doctor's household, there being now three of each. Of course, but it is possible in due time she may attach her fortunes to some good man who will teach her the ways of peace happiness that pertain to pure Democracy. In the meantime, we congratulate the happy parents and tender our best wishes to them and theirs.

The "burnt district" is covered with a weed new to this section—a rapid spreader, which deserves early destruction. It is called the Texas Pig-weed, or Thorney Careless, and has another name beside, which we cannot just now recall. In a week or two the seed will have ripened and the autumn winds will scatter them to the four points of the compass, unless in the meantime the owners of the lots shall have prudently cut the weeds and burned them. This new menace to useful vegetation is supposed to have been imported by mowers from the south.

Andrew Bugg, Esq., of Patterson, Mo., came to the Valley Monday to place an adopted daughter in the Ursuline Academy. After concluding his business, he took a day to look around and view the changes that had taken place during his absence of more than thirty years—for Mr. Bugg was born and reared in the Valley. He called to see us, and we happily renewed an acquaintance interrupted by the war thirty-odd years ago. He is in good health, a prosperous farmer and an esteemed citizen. May his days be long in the land.

The REGISTER acknowledges the receipt of a copy of Lesueur's Official Manual for the State of Missouri for the year 1894-95. For years an almost indispensable adjunct to business and newspaper offices, this year it is more valuable than ever, containing several new features. One of these is a postal directory giving the name and location of every post-office in the State. There isn't a page in the book (except the "biographies") which is not of value to every citizen of Missouri. We congratulate Secretary Lesueur upon the completeness of his work.

With the front yard ablaze with china lanterns and the parlor turned into a veritable bower of flowers and palms, the residence of Mr. Doty gave token to passers by that some unusual event was taking place there last Tuesday evening. It was the marriage of Miss Bessie Doty to Mr. James Lily. At 9 o'clock Miss Robie French began playing the grand wedding march, the bride and groom took their places under a beautiful floral horseshoe and as the music ceased, Rev. Myron Cooley stepped forward and said the solemn and beautiful words that are so expressive as linking the two lives together. After congratulations, refreshments were served. The only guests present aside from the families of the happy couple were Mrs. Salisbury and Miss Ritter of Hemet, Miss H. M. Brown of Ironton, Missouri, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Martin of Highlands and Miss Robie French of Cotton.—Cotton, (Cal.) News, August 23.

Two very creditable entertainments were given by local talent in the Academy of Music within the past few weeks: one by Miss Baird's music class, and the other by the young ladies visiting and resident of the Valley. Both entertainments filled the house to overflowing, and the only thing that marred their enjoyment was the outrageous conduct of a few would-be up-to-date young gentlemen. The better class of the audience, as well as those on the stage, were annoyed and disgusted by the uproarious conduct of this select few, who deafened the ear with whistling, yelling, horse-laughing, and all the various methods of showing their "smartness." At times, when the children, in the one instance, or the young ladies in the other, were singing on the stage, these shallow-pated youths would join in the choruses in a sarcastic manner, demonstrating to their own satisfaction their contempt for all present save themselves. Complaint of these things on the part of the public is frequent and urgent, and a stop must be put to them. The management of the Academy cannot endure it, and if it did the public ought to cease patronizing the hall. We hope the offenders will take warning, if they do not, the most radical measures will be taken to make them behave decently. This is both official and certain.

In an article relative to the opening of Bellevue Collegiate Institute, last week, the Farmington Herald says: "The perfect satisfaction which the people of Caledonia manifest over the prospective removal of the Conference School is somewhat surprising. They regret the doubtful ability of the people of Fredericktown to complete the building and secure the conference school and seem to think that when the conference convenes again and learns the true situation they will hesitate to accept the deal given them by the people of Fredericktown. They are inclined to the belief that when the conference learns how they have been deceived with regard to the Fredericktown movement; when they see that the subscription and bond for $25,000 which the Fredericktown forces so loudly declared on the floor of the conference was as well worth $25,000 as one dollar is good for another, is by no means worth that amount; when they learn that the proposed building when completed (if it is ever completed) will fall far short in size of what they represented it would be; when they learn that the cost of construction has been greatly reduced, and that several thousand dollars have been borrowed to put the building in its present unfinished condition; and the time for the completion having past—Fredericktown will fail to make terms with the conference; they being under no obligations to accept the building in an unfinished condition and with a large debt on it. The present Board of Curators of the Conference School was prevented from organizing a school in the B. C. I. building by the persistent promises that the building at Fredericktown would be completed in due time. Had they known what is evident now the conference school would have been arranged for at Caledonia, as it was the understanding with the conference and was so given out by the Bishop that the B. C. I. should be the only educational institution in the requirements for another one at some other place had been fully met. But whether the St. Louis Conference permits itself to be made the victim of a huge confidence game, or not, the Bellevue Collegiate Institute at Caledonia is going to continue right on and maintain its reputation for being one of the best educational institutions in south Missouri." These be grievous words, brethren! They go far to confirm the belief of the REGISTER that the "no-location" was a bunko game clear through.

The life of the station-agent isn't always cast in the pleasantest places, nor are all his days possessed of ease and peace. One day within the bounds of the month just ended passenger train No. 2 brought to Arcadia, among other persons, two rather fresh-looking females. These latter entered the station and asked for two trunks which they claimed were there. The agent searched among the baggage, but the Saratogas were not to be found, and he so told the women. The fair ones insisted: they had shipped the trunks that morning at Annapolis, and they again protested to the contrary, when the ladies told him he was "a d-d liar!" Cy held his temper, and asked, "where are the checks?" They had none, but they knew the trunks were here. "Did you get on this train at Annapolis?" No; they had started the day before, had stopped off at Sabula, walked to Hogan, and got on this train there. But they had told the Annapolis agent they were going to Arcadia. "Ladies, your trunks are not here. They may have been put off at Sabula." The ladies replied, "You're a d-d liar! they are here, and we're going to have them!" Cy had other business to attend to, and left them, but they followed him. "If you do not deliver our trunks there will be h—l to pay!" If they're not here telegraph for them." Cy replied, "There is no office at Sabula." You're a d-d liar!" "I mean there is no telegraph office here." "You're an infernal liar, for we was there and know better!" The agent's good nature here gave way and he told the ladies that if they didn't "git" without delay he would remove them with neatness and dispatch. The flash of his eyes reinforced his words, and his tormentors with a volley of cuss-words at length left him master of the field. They next turned up at Stafford's livery stable, kept by Mr. Hasty, and told him they were old soldiers' wives on their way to Ironton to transact some business. That they were hungry and wanted something to eat. Mr. Hasty, who is a veteran, took compassion on them, and requested his wife to prepare dinner for them. She proceeded to do so, but while so engaged, the ladies, who had gone out into the street, were heard using such fearful language that Mr. H. countermanded the order for dinner, and barricaded the doors against their return. The "old soldiers' wives" took themselves to parts unknown, leaving Cy and the livery man to console with each other over the hard fate that deprived them of the society of so much female loveliness, gentleness and vivacity.

"Sum Pumpkins."

I stopped at Mr. Thompson Blanton's last night, and this morning I was shown over the Blanton place. And such fields of corn I saw—such stacks of oats—and such pumpkins as I saw in the field! And such garden fruit. I was shown a pumpkin vine that Mrs. Blanton planted in that garden. It beat everything I have ever seen in that line. Some one gave Mrs. B. two seeds of pumpkin, she planted them, and one seed only came up. Mr. B. and I measured the vine. It sent out two vines. Each measured 25 feet and the laterals measured 200 feet, with two pumpkins, that measured five feet each, making twenty feet of circumference. And I tell you that that same ground thirty years ago when he first settled there, would not bear black-eyed peas; so poor rattle-boxes would not grow on that ground. And you just ought to have sat at the table and eaten some of the biggest, sweetest sweet potatoes, and everything else that is good; the table surrounded with such a lot of good, healthy boys and girls. But O my! Such a mean road to go there! It was too bad to have the pleasure of the trip marred with such a horrible road. T. P. R.

Graniteville Items.

Ed. Register—Died, on Friday night last, at 12 o'clock, after a lingering illness, Michael Egan, Jr., of consumption, aged about 34 years. Deceased had been in bad health for two years, and at different times sought relief while in Mullaphy Hospital at St. Louis. Some four months ago he had recovered so as to be able to take a trip south, going to San Antonio, Texas, at which place he remained a couple of months, and feeling considerably improved returned home apparently much better, but did not remain so very long. He very shortly began failing again, but never took to his bed until a week ago, growing weaker day by day until death relieved him of his sufferings at midnight last Friday. The remains were conveyed to the Catholic church, where Rev. Father Wernert delivered an eloquent eulogy at 2 o'clock P. M. Sunday, after which the remains were taken to the Middlebrook cemetery and there laid to rest in the family lot that contains now the bodies of three sons that were called in the prime of life—Thomas, Daniel and Michael, all of whom have been called in the last three years. A very large concourse of sympathizing friends attended the burial. Mr. Foley is now the only survivor of his once happy family, and although well up in years is still healthy and robust. But in this, his hour of sorrow, we extend to him kind words of cheer, and the heartfelt sympathies of all his many friends and acquaintances.

There will be no demonstration of any kind here to-day in honor of "Labor Day," except a suspension of work for the day only.
The farmers are buying up all the loose cattle and hogs they can find in this locality, to consume the large corn crop that is being raised. Prices are steady and strong, and sales are quick.

Trade has suddenly become dull in our town.
About ten men left last week for Amber, Wis., and during the last two weeks some thirty men have migrated to other points.
